“ My mother was a woman of strength. She lived life her way, through joys and challenges. Her beauty was equal to her caring for others. A difficult childhood developed a woman of strength. Dancing was her outlet for fun and when Dad passed 17 years ago, she dove into line-dancing and was everyone’s favorite dance teacher. With 3 sisters and a brother, there was always family around to play poker, too. Mom’s open heart surgery slowed her down a bit 10 years ago, and she was affected by her youngest son, George’s death from MS 5 years ago. But when she was told she had colon cancer 3 years ago she decided to have no medical treatment and again, did it her way. She remained in her home and cared for it and herself all that time. I assisted her as much as she allowed me to. Her wishes were challenging for me at times but my belief in full respect for her requests became a personal time of growth. She enjoyed seeing the grandchildren and great-grandchildren when she was well. After that she couldn’t wait to see pictures of them on my cellphone. She watched Mass on tv every morning from Rome, and died such a good Catholic. Seeing her in pain for the last few months gave me deeper respect for her and her wanting to die her own way, in her home and in her bed. And that’s exactly what happened. I received my strength from my mother, and her mother before her. She will be missed as she is out of our sight, but we know she is on the other side of the veil of creation, in that space called heaven. Her soul’s in another existence and I can only believe she is feeling our love. “Love you forever, Mom - Kathy”
